Review

- All manuscripts submitted to the Editorial Board are reviewed. Reviewers are either members of the Editorial Board or the Editorial Council or outstanding professionals experienced in the scientific field declared in the manuscript.
- The review evaluates the significance of problems discussed in the manuscript, the correspondence of presented findings to the declared subject, the authors' research contribution, and the validity of conclusions.

- The manuscript should be reviewed within a month after its receipt by the reviewer.
- The review should be sent to the authors of the manuscript. In the event the authors agree with comments, they have the right to introduce changes and submit the manuscript once more. In this case the peer review procedure may be repeated.

The authors of the manuscript are free to submit a reasoned disagreement with the reviewer's opinion. A decision on its further reviewing is made by the Editor-in-Chief or his/her Deputy.

- A final decision on the possibility to publish the manuscript is made by the Editorial Board.
